"FIFTY YEARS OF PROGRESS"

THE first 50 years are the hardest. It was in the fall of 1888 that the writer, then a slim lad of barely 21 years, affixed his signature to a three-year lease on some 17 acres of land two and one-half miles west of Spokane. This property, known as the Morgan Homestead, contained bearing fruit trees, small fruit plantings and meager equipment for vegetable gardening.

With positively no knowledge of soil tillage, with no experience in production or cultivation of the vegetable kingdom, fortified only with a strong determination to succeed, I undertook production and distribution of fruits and vegetables to the hungry workers of Spokane, that they might build the foundations to a mighty city of the future.

The following incident is related to exemplify my early inexperience in my life work:

One fine April day in 1889 my lady landlord, Mrs. Morgan, inspecting the premises, noticed the untouched asparagus bed, which had grown up, because of inattention, to a two or three foot height. Asked why I hadn't marketed the asparagus, I replied frankly that I didn't know what the plant was, but rather assumed it belonged to the willow family because it grew so fast, especially on warm days. The next day, acting on newly found advice, I cut all the asparagus, tall and short, the old tough shoots and the tender, into lengths seven or eight inches long, and took them to market. I went first to the leading food store, and proudly offered my wares. The owner replied: "Fresh Spokane asparagus? Sure, we'll take all you have." He visited my wagon to see his purchase and as I exposed the asparagus for his inspection, his features gathered a frown, gave me a piercing inquisitive look and then sheepishly (I thought) said: "I can't use this grass. I believe we have some coming from the commission house." This change of mind in my prospective customer was staggering and disappointing to me. I decided to offer my product to less pretentious merchants and sought secondary grocery stores. I spotted one that was just opening up a new store. "How much do you want for your grass?" "Only 15 cents a pound for the lot," I replied. After he consulted the commission house who reported none on hand but might have some in a few days at 22 cents per pound, my novice vegetable merchant replied, "Bring it in." I did. I was learning something every day.

The fifth of August that year found the entire business section of our city in smouldering ashes. Everything combustible was destroyed, which included all food stocks. The few packages on the home pantry shelves soon were depleted. Transportation was slow in those days and reserves unknown in western merchandising. Those of us who were engaged in producing natural food required no urge to fill every available acre with seeds and plants. Disposition of any product at remunerative prices required no salesmanship. The difficulties were in production because of help scarcity.

Two years as grower, salesman and cook were trying on the boss, especially so was the kitchen department. I met, frequently, one particular girl for over a year and on Christmas day we were married. That partnership is now 48 years old.

The vicissitudes that attended each day's outlook, the anticipation to be owner and manager of an industry, the picture of the future that contained areas of glass gardens, nurseries, children and homes—these were surely the controlling factors that forged the link and the tie that bound. After ten years in our original home, one of our aspirations was consummated in the purchase of a twenty-acre home. Then the real work began, as all who have had this experience will testify.

The first requisite was a twelve by sixty greenhouse augmented by numerous hotbeds and cold-frames. While the business had been built largely as a retail, the increased acreage and the soil adaptability rather tended to a wholesale business in many specialized productions such as celery, cauliflower, asparagus, etc.; yet, still catering to the retail trade with many other varieties. The natural evolution of this phase of the horticultural industry was at once adopted in the increased production of plants, both inside as well as outside. Acres of strawberry plants were grown together with root crop plants. One hundred thousand of our asparagus roots set the first asparagus plantation in the Imperial Valley, California. British Columbia and Alaska have set many thousands of our roots and plants. The Kelly Gardens are known—and we believe favorably—in all Pacific and Mountain states. Clean culture and constant vigilance have produced plant stock that never has been questioned by inspection officials.

Greenhouse area has increased to care for our flower and florist stock productions. The propagation and growing of ornamental trees and shrubs are assuming considerable proportions and with the beautiful evergreens, a complete nursery is attained. Tulips, Narcissi, Gladioli and Lily bulbs are grown in acreages for which our lands are well adapted. Our slogan, "If it's a plant, we grow it," seldom disappoints.

We have attempted in this foregoing article a word picture from memory, covering the fifty years of our efforts. Now, past the proverbial "three score and ten," the founder and writer must lay down his implements and permit younger minds and hands to carry on from here, just as we had done, and related in the first lines of this article, fifty years ago. That our son, Harry, and his wife will, we are sure, present a more interesting picture to you when you pass this way fifty years hence.

We want to express our sincere appreciation to the thousands of friends and customers throughout the west for the business confidence reposed in us, and we express the hope that you will permit the Kelly Plant Gardens to assist in any service that pertains to horticultural life.

A. A. KELLY.

WHEN ORDERING

—write name and address plainly. Order early in order to insure delivery of stock wanted. Remittance must accompany order. Stamps are accepted up to $1.00. Money orders, express orders, bank drafts and certified checks preferred. Because our merchandise is extremely perishable, we do not ship C. O. D. Owing to the fact that there are invariable shortages of some varieties, we kindly ask that customers state their permission for us to substitute the nearest variety to the one ordered in case we should be sold out.

Because all of our business comes with a rush in an extremely short portion of the year, mistakes sometimes creep in. In case of complaint, please write us promptly. We will do all in our power to immediately and courteously rectify the error.

While we hold ourselves in readiness, on proper proof, to replace free of charge all stock that may prove untrue to label, or refund the amount paid, we give no warranty expressed or implied as to description, quality, productiveness or any other matter of any stock, seeds, bulbs, or plants we sell.

KELLY'S MASTODON

EVERBEARING

MASTODON—This variety has proven its worth in every locality. The fruit is immense and the plants yield heavily. Plants set in the spring will produce a fine crop of delicious fruit the same summer. We can strongly recommend Mastodon for garden or commercial planting.

GEM—Indications point to Gem as being the finest ever-bearer ever introduced. For quality of flavor it surpasses Mastodon and in size it is nearly as large. In ripening it colors up a brilliant red all over. Also, Gem is a splendid keeper, equalling any of the standard varieties in this respect. Be sure to give Gem a trial.

PROGRESSIVE—A prolific sweet berry. Is not as firm as Mastodon, but a popular berry for the home garden.

Prices, all Everbearing varieties, prepaid. Doz. 40c; 25, 75c; 50, $1.25; 100, $2.00; 1000, $12.50.

NEW OREGON—A western variety and seemingly combines the splendid characteristics of the Hood River and Glen Mary types in its fruit. It is grown extensively with complete satisfaction.

GLEN MARY—A bright handsome standard sort, grows the country over.

MARSHALL—A well known popular berry.

DORSETT—An early berry, very firm and a heavy producer. Color a bright red, a color the market likes.

FAIRFAX—A medium early berry. It is firmer than any other variety, good sized and has the reputation of being the most delicious berry in existence.

HOWARD NO. 17 or PREMIER—The plant growth is fine. Foliage very dark and healthy. Fruit firm and large. This is a good one to plant.

CLARK SEEDLING—It is unsurpassed as a shipping variety.

ARBOR VITAE

EVERGREENS

Evergreens, with their beautiful symmetry and their richness of color, add grace and dignity to the landscape design as no other nursery product can. Within the past few years, evergreens have gained in favor for the planting of the home so that now, the modern design calls for practically all evergreens. And this favor has been justly won for, in winter as well as summer, their wonderful shapeliness and their gorgeous hues inoculate their surroundings with a spirit of cheerfulness and satisfaction.

To flank an entrance, the taller growing varieties are particularly effective; for rock walls, terraces and rockeries, the prostrate types should be used. As single specimens out in the lawn, there is no more beautiful than the Colorado Blue Spruce. For windbreaks and backgrounds, use the Norway and Colorado Blue Spruce.

Remember our help and advice in beautifying your home is positively free, hence feel free to write us on any of these questions. We are sure that we can assist you.

All of our Evergreens are dug with a large ball of earth about the roots to insure safe transplanting. Crating and transportation are charged at cost.
